PERTINENT INFORMATION
1. Ghuri left Beirut for Cairo, by ship, on 16 May 1950, arriving on the following day. 2. He then sent a cable to Ibrahim Abu-Da'ayi, telling the latter to delay his projected departure for Cairo, because the Grand MUFTI was not sailing until 3. Abu-Da'ayi, however, ignored the cable, and flew to Cairo on 18 May. Source Comment: Source is convinced that Ghuri would not have sent the above-mentioned cable to Abu-Da'ayi without first having received the Grand MUFTI's permission. He believes that, to have proceeded in setting the negotiation, Ghuri stressed to the MUFTI the high cost of travel and living expenses for Abu-Da'ayi and his wife, as well as Abu-Da'ayi's difficulty in getting around (he is badly crippled in both legs from wounds received in the Palestine fighting.) In source's opinion, Ghuri did not want Abu-Da'ayi in Cairo, as Ghuri has learned a little about the "Wolf War Fighters" movement and now wants to be the top man in that organization. With Abu-Da'ayi absent, Ghuri could persuade the MUFTI that he himself was responsible for whatever success the organization has had thus far. He would then undoubtedly get money and arms from the MUFTI to carry on the work, thus forming Abu-Da'ayi out. Source adds that the MUFTI thinks a great deal more of Abu-Da'ayi than he does of Ghuri."
